Forecast For London & Southeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 08 Apr 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Cloudy but milder today. Showers later.

Today:
Becoming mostly cloudy across the region on Thursday morning, though probably remaining dry. Brighter spells developing into the afternoon, perhaps with the odd shower almost anywhere. Feeling much milder. Maximum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Tonight:
Cloud will begin to thin overnight with some clear spells developing. Remaining dry with a touch of grass frost possible across rural parts by the end of the night. Minimum temperature 0 deg C (32 deg F).

Friday:
A largely dry and bright start on Friday. A risk of a light shower in the afternoon before a band of cloud and rain edges slowly southwards overnight. Maximum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Cold and cloudy with rain or an outside chance of wintry showers on Saturday and Sunday. Likely drier and milder into Monday, but with widespread overnight frosts likely.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.